Local Author Debuts True Story of Two Ducks Who Found Home on the Tred Avon River

Easton, Maryland — Fall 2026

Lisa A. Craig, a Talbot County author and longtime magazine art director, has published her first book, Birds of a Feather: A True Story of Being Lost and Finding Home, under her own imprint, Third Haven Press.

The 36-page hardcover picture book tells the true story of Howard, a Pekin duck, and Charlie, a mallard, who found belonging together at Mallards' Rest on the Tred Avon River — the property where Craig lives. The book is aimed at readers ages 4–8.

Craig brings more than 25 years of publishing experience to the project, having worked as an Art Director for national and international consumer and trade magazines, run her own design agency producing covers and jackets for more than 50 titles, and worked at a book production company. Birds of a Feather is her first book as an author.

Birds of a Feather is available now for individual order at $20.99 through the author's one-time presale — readers who order by September 21 are guaranteed a copy, with delivery by the end of October. The book will also be distributed through IngramSpark this fall, making it available to bookstores, schools, and libraries nationwide.

The illustrations in Birds of a Feather began as the author's own photographs of Howard and Charlie, taken on the Tred Avon River. Those photographs were then stylized with software and AI tools, under the author's full creative direction, into the finished illustrations seen in the book.
